In the Gospel reading, people marvel when Jesus heals a man who can neither hear nor speak, opening his ears and loosing his tongue. Their astonishment is appropriate, since Jesus is fulfilling what the prophet Isaiah foretold: "Then will ... the ears of the deaf be cleared, then the tongue of the mute will sing" (Isaiah 35:5, 6). The key to understanding the amazement in the Gospel is in Isaiah's word then. When will these things happen? When God comes with vindication and divine recompense to save his people Israel. When they see those signs— the blind see, the deaf hear, the mute speak — they will know, "Here is your God!"

Mark's Gospel shows Jesus performing these signs and declares, "Here is your God!" Mark places Jesus in the role of Yhwh, the Savior of Israel. But there's more. The healing occurs in the region known as the Decapolis -ten Roman cities originally settled by Greeks. It's unclear whether the man that Jesus healed is a Jew or a Greek, but Jesus' healing ministry in the Decapolis region hints at his mission to save not only Israel but the world.
