Following Christ means to break free from immature ways of thinking and acting. The Gospel's teachings are God's dreams for the world. But we often fail to understand the truth of Christ's teachings, viewing this same world through fantasies of power, pride, greed, fear and obsession. Instead of following a path to eternal life, we build monuments to our egos. It is easy to forget that, with death, our fantasies will vanish even faster than our bodies will return to the dust.

Living the Gospel means trading a life of fantasy for one that follows the mind of God. The challenges and results of this transformation are the theme of this Sunday's readings. For example, Jeremiah served Israel's king and came from an elite family. His prophecy of invasion and exile was so ominous, however, that most rejected him. As this Sunday's first reading recounts, he struggled as an outcast, but he remained committed to the mind of God, and this ensured that Israel survived the coming disaster. When Jesus instructs his disciples to deny themselves, take up their cross, and follow him, he is speaking to exactly the kind of life Jeremiah lived.

Disciples who catch sight of God's dreams often find that they want even more, feeling a desire for God's dreams often find that they want even more, feeling a desire for God's presence in both soul and body. This Sunday's responsorial psalm speaks of a soul thirsting for God like a desert for rain. Satisfying this desire requires an offering of the whole self, as St. Paul instructs in this Sunday's second reading. Those who offer soul and body as a living sacrifice will begin to understand the mind of God and discover a life of abundant grace.

Missionary Cooperation Plan 2026

Still time to Donate

One of the diocesan efforts to promote mission awareness and spiritual union with missionary efforts throughout the world is the Diocesan Missionary Cooperation Plan (MCP). Because of the many needs for new and developing churches in underdeveloped countries, the need for our support is as urgent today as ever.

John and Katy Tucker shared about the important missionary work they have been doing for over 30 years. Helping infants to young adults. Please take a yellow envelope to make your donation. Envelopes are available on the church tables and in the pews. We will collect all donations during the regular collection in all masses. Every amount helps.

Thank you for your generosity and continued support.

Join Fr. Carl Schlichte, O.P., for this free workshop as he personally shares the spiritual and practical insights he has learned from his journey with depression. Adverse childhood effects, such as parental divorce and separation, may affect on-going mental health and well-being into adulthood. As part of this workshop, we will share more about Life-Giving Wounds Ministry and how it may benefit as on-going healing.
